Weekly Newsletter

June 23, 2019

There was a photo of former president Jimmy Carter on the internet. He was standing with his hands on his hips, wearing a blue work shirt, a red bandana and a hat. A tool belt was slung around his waist with a metal square protruding from a pocket. Apparently the photo was taken at a building project in Haiti. Carter continues to do volunteer work well into his nineties.

The caption of the photo was a quote from Carter: My faith demands that I do whatever I can, wherever I am, whenever I can, for as long as I can with whatever I have to try to make a difference.

Carter is also still an active farmer as well and while my eldest son was enrolled in agricultural college in south Georgia it was no surprise for Carter to drop in to attend a particular class.

I offer neither praise nor ridicule for the former president, but several things do stand out about these circumstances.

First, he is neither too comfortable nor too successful nor too old nor too busy to serve.

Second, his service is an outgrowth of a faith that drives him into the wilderness of other peoples' lives.

Third, his use of the word whatever suggests that he holds nothing of himself or his resources back in his faith driven service.

Fourth, a person in their nineties who continues to go to school is a person who is not afraid to have their assumptions challenged or embrace new knowledge.

Next Sunday, June 30th, the Mission Committee is sponsoring a lunch following church catered by Rowdy Ranch. This will be a great opportunity to be inspired to serve as a matter of faith and also to learn something new about the wilderness in which many in our community continue to live. Be sure to put this event on your calendar for June 30th.

See you next Sunday!

Godspeed,

Allen
